Feel DownTown

Night blue, dark sky, a view from a boat over the wide river, shimmering, slightly moving water, going downwards, to where?
Carrying sparkling light points, random, sending squeamish beams, disappearing where?
So many, so numerous, as nature behaves, profusely, wasteful, therefore with strength, with beauty, for what?
To make people distracted from their troubles?
Senseless?
Night blue, dark sky surrounds Downtown behind the water, protecting it, threatening it?
Window lights come through, hiding so many human destinies, their differences, their similarities.
There seems to be life in the streets, intellectual beings, loathsome things, arts, there is music in the clubs.
